

Deliberate and specific retrieval of expected prior knowledge (be specific)  From KS3: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Prior experience using a thermometer, heater, and balance</li> <li>Hotter objects will lose energy to their surroundings. This can be reduced through insulation</li> </ul> From earlier in year 10: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Understanding of internal energy and the particle model</li> <li>Familiarity with temperature vs energy – temperature is a measure of average kinetic energy.</li> <li>Simple energy calculations from earlier physics topics, such as <math>E=P \times t</math></li> </ul>	Academic transformation (be specific) Students will understand: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Application of the specific heat capacity equation:  <math>\Delta E = mc\Delta\theta</math></li> <li>Use of real experimental data (from the required practical) to derive or compare specific heat capacity values.</li> <li>Development of numerical fluency in rearranging equations and unit conversions (Joules, kg, °C).</li> <li>Appreciation of energy dissipation and experimental error – learning how heat loss affects results.</li> <li>Modelling heating in real materials – e.g. why metals heat faster than water or concrete.</li> <li>Definition of specific latent heat, and application of the equation <math>\Delta E = mL</math> for changes of state</li> <li>Interpretation of temperature-time graphs to identify patterns in heating and cooling.</li> </ul>	Personal transformation (2 or 3) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Connecting the abstract calculations to everyday applications: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Why metal spoons feel colder than wood (specific heat capacity &amp; conductivity).</li> <li>How engineers choose materials for cooking pots or building insulation.</li> </ul> </li> <li>Investigating how thermal storage systems (e.g. hot water tanks, lava stones, night storage heaters) use high specific heat capacity materials.</li> <li>Awareness of career links: materials science, renewable energy systems, thermal engineering</li> </ul>
Can I Learning Questions Can I define and calculate the specific heat capacity of a material? Can I use practical measurements to calculate specific heat capacity? Can I define and calculate specific latent heat? Can I link SHC and SLH to heating curves? Can I combine the SHC and SLH equations in complex questions?	Literacy and Oracy Report Writing:  Required practical Methods: Measuring specific heat capacity  Extended writing: "Why do some materials heat up faster than others?" Verbal Discussion &amp; Debate:          Think-Pair-Share e.g. "What makes a material good at storing heat?" Website Links for Research &amp; Engagement:  https://theconversation.com/conservation-policies-threaten-indigenous-reindeer-herders-in-mongolia-121729   https://www.sciencedirect.com/topics/engineering/thermal-energy-storage   https://www.nationalgeographic.com/science/article/solar-water-heating	Misconceptions (5 or 6 examples) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Temperature and energy are the same"              – Students often confuse energy input with the temperature change it causes.</li> <li>All materials heat up at the same rate"              – Overlooking the role of specific heat capacity and mass.</li> <li>"Once heat is added, temperature always rises"              – Not understanding that energy can go into changing state or spreading out.</li> <li>"A small object always heats faster than a big one"              – Misunderstanding the role of mass and specific heat capacity together.</li> <li>"If you double the temperature, you double the energy"              – Temperature scales aren't directly proportional to energy</li> <li>"The heater adds heat, not energy"              – Confusing the colloquial use of "heat" with the physical concept of energy transfer.</li> </ul>